Iconography

05 / Icon Set for Visual Communication

EveryMatrix Brand Guidelines

An example of the icon style we use for our visual communication. These icons have subtle characteristic cues that appear on the outer edges of the shape. Because of this, an outline style makes those cues easier to notice.

If there is already an icon made signifying something, you must use that icon.

No new icons can be introduced when there is an existing one signifying the same thing.

You cannot just create an icon and use it. New icons must be vetted through our design team.

Successful icon design is subjective, so having an design team that is tasked with managing them is the most sure way of guaranteeing consistency.
